AP Mine Ban Convention May 2012

DDG is a non-governmental organization (NGO) and part of the Danish Refugee Council (DRC) performing protection work, demining and armed violence reduction in 35 countries around the world.

We are practitioner only

Our work with communities is guided by the humanitarian principles of sustainability, respect for human rights, community participation and 'do no harm'

Our work with national authorities is guided by partnership and trust

We believe that cleared land is not the end result but rather a means to a new end

What assistance is DDG after to offer?

Danish Demining Group (DDG) delivers safety and security to people through the reclamation of previously-dangerous land.

We teach safe practices and provide injury prevention tools to men, women and children to protect against future accidents.

We work with local governments to ensure that mine action work is long-term and effective.

In our work we are utilizing a strong evidence based approach in both identified the problem as well as monitoring the impact of our intervention.

Therefore we are guided by impact not output, and in this way we improve our services to the people affected, as well as providing information to the national authorities and international agencies to guide policy and practice.
