OAS, Program of Assistance for Integral Mine Action

IMPLEMENTING PARTNERS :

Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Defense, Army, National Police

OBJECTIVES :*BUDGET YEAR 1:

US$ 1,300,580

TIME FRAME YEAR 1:

January 2003- December 2003

SHORFALL YEAR 1:

SUMMARY :

Due to technical matters and extremely difficult conditions for most mined areas along the country, it has been estimated that a 8-9 year period will be necessary to complete all demining stages in Peru. <"/>

Statistics on mine victims are incomplete and inaccurate due to the distant location of the affected areas. Peruvian authorities have completed a report that shows 179 mine victims since 1995. That number includes 62 soldiers, 67 policemen and 50 civilians.

Peru has an Office of Action against Mines. It is mainly composed of members of the Armed Forces of Peru. The Army operates with a total number of 140 sappers. They were trained, equipped and supported by the United States prior to the signing of the agreement with OAS on the assistance of the Action against Mines.

OVERALL ENVIRONMENT

A cease-fire agreement was signed between the Government and UNITA military forces on April 4, 2002. This, and other recent encouraging developments have resulted in renewed international interest in supporting mine action activities in Angola, as well as putting increased pressure on newly formed mine action institution. There is a major need for external assistance to support the establishment and development of national management systems in order to ensure effecting national coordination of mine action efforts. Angola is party to the AP Mine Ban Convention.

THE LANDMINE AND UXO THREAT AND ITS IMPACT

Wars conducted in Angola from 1961 to 2002 have left as many as seven million landmines scattered throughout the country. The provincial capitals of Huambo and Bie, as well as many locations in the Benguela, Malanje, Moxico, Kuando Kunbango and Uíge provinces, are among the areas most severely contaminated. This widespread infestation is a major obstacle limiting the free movement of people and goods, and seriously efforts to generate socio-economic development.

The weapons also impede the resettlement and return of refugees, and put thousands of Angolans at risk of

Victim Assistance

HomeSite MapSearchComments

Other links : ICRC | WHO | LSN | World Rehabilitation Fund | DESA

Thousands of individuals have already fallen victim to landmines. In 2001, the Landmine Monitor estimated that on average 15,000 to 20,000 people were being killed or injured by landmines every year worldwide. While the actual figure is unknown, it may well be far greater, since many victims of mine accidents never reach a health centre and are therefore not registered.

Victim assistance is a core component of mine action and an obligation of States Parties under the Antipersonnel Mine Ban Treaty. Article Six of the Treaty states that "Each State Party in a position to do so shall provide assistance for the care and rehabilitation, and social and economic reintegration, of mine victims and for mine awareness programs." Victim assistance activities range from emergency medical care to physical rehabilitation, psychological support, and social and economic reintegration.

Within the UN system, the World Health Organisation (WHO) is responsible for the development of appropriate standards and methodologies for victim assistance, and for promoting capacity building in this area. Other UN entities, in particular UNICEF, also support victim assistance activities. They all work closely with partner organisations outside the United Nations system, such as the International Committee of the Red Cross \(ICRC\), Landmine Survivors Network \(LSN\), World Rehabilitation Fund \(WRF\), Handicap International \(HI\) and Vietnam Veterans of America Foundation \(VAF\).

UN victim assistance efforts take place in the context of a strategic framework presented in Maputo in 1999 by the Swiss Agency for Development for Cooperation, which comprises seven principles. Of key importance is the principle of non discrimination: while assistance to victims of landmines is a core component of mine action, all victims of violence and traumas, not simply landmine victims, deserve assistance and access to health and rehabilitation services. Services designed to assist people disabled by Landmines must therefore also be available to those disabled from other causes.

Resource Mobilisation

Mine action relies on the commitment of resources by national governments, international organisations and private organisations of different types. States Parties to the Antipersonnel Mine Ban Treaty are bound, when they have the means to do so, to provide mine action assistance to affected countries. In 2000, it is estimated that approximately US$200 million has been donated for mine action activities worldwide. Of this total, about 40% was channelled through the United Nations system.

There exist several mechanisms for mobilising and channelling donor funds to UN mine action efforts. These include:

- The Voluntary Trust Fund for Assistance in Mine Action (VTF), managed by the United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS);
- The country-specific trust funds, generally managed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) with the exception of the Afghanistan Emergency Trust Fund, which is managed by UNOCHA;
- The United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP); and,
- The Adopt-a-Minefield programme of the United Nations Association of the United States and the

Funding Guidelines / Processes: Canada

Funding Sources:

In March 1998 the Government of Canada established the $100 million, 5-year Canadian Landmine Fund. These funds were allocated for (a) Ottawa Convention ratification and universalization, (b) international coordination, global priority setting and monitoring Convention implementation, (c) the destruction of anti-personnel mine stockpiles, (d) research, development and marketing of appropriate Canadian mine action-related technologies, (e) mine clearance and (f) victim assistance and mine awareness. The responsibility of managing this fund was assigned to the Management Board of the Canadian Landmines Fund, which is composed of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, International Cooperation, Defence and Industry and is chaired by the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Management Board's Secretariat is headed jointly by the Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs and the President of Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA). Although each of the four relevant government departments has an assigned mandate with respect to the Canadian Landmine Fund, given the four-department partnership in managing the fund there is considerable cooperation between departments in how funds are spent.

Funding Processes:

Organizations interested in receiving financial support from the Canadian Landmine Fund for mine action programs should submit detailed written project proposals. The Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) and the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade (DFAIT) consider requests for funding for projects related to mine clearance, victim assistance, mine awareness, research to enhance the quantity and quality of mine action information, advocacy in support of the universalization and full implementation of the Ottawa Convention and domestic outreach. Project proposals received are forwarded to the relevant program officer in the appropriate department. This officer is tasked assessing requests for funding in relationship to Canada's funding criteria and priorities and then making a funding recommendation. DFAIT and CIDA attempt to communicate funding decisions to applicants within one month of the receipt of funding requests. Inquiries pertaining to funding mine action technology projects are directed to the
